The five candidates

#	Candidate	Problem statement as tested	P1	P2	Outcome
C1	Money already spoken for	People don't know how much of their income is already committed to recurring charges and debt payments, so they overspend on what's left and stay in debt longer.	5	·	Dropped after Phase 1
C2	Eating toward a body goal	People trying to bulk, cut, or maintain can't tell in advance whether the day's meals will hit their macro targets, so they log after the fact, fall short, and stop tracking.	5	13	Dropped after Phase 2
C3	Entertainment and events tracker	People find it hard to find events/places to go to in El Paso/Juarez, often finding out after the events have already happened.	6	12	Selected
C4	Market Master	Nearly half of Americans do not hold any investment assets, and the primary reasons for not investing highlight a major educational gap.	5	·	Dropped after Phase 1
C5	Searching across streaming services	People who pay for three or more streaming services have no single place to search across them, so finding one title means checking each service in turn, and they often give up or pay to rent something a service they already subscribe to carries.	5	·	Dropped after Phase 1

Phase 1 · Candidate 1: Money already spoken for

5 interviews

P1-C1-01 Sep 5, 2026

Warehouse worker

Fort Worth, TX, Emmanuel Saenz

Personal finance

Used an Excel spreadsheet to manually track expenses but lost motivation after a while.

> So back in around February I got motivated to create a spreadsheet by using those templates they provide for you, as a way to keep track of my personal finances. First week or two I was actually tracking everything, however by the third week I ended up getting lazy and just stopped.

> Mostly updating the spreadsheet every day and having to record my expenses became a hassle.

P1-C1-02 Sep 5, 2026

Financial advisor

Fort Worth, TX, Emmanuel Saenz

Personal finance and work finance

A finance professional did not stick with manual categorization since it required daily manual updating.

> Last year I tried switching from a budgeting app I normally use to a spreadsheet to have more control over what categories I could track. I ended up creating a spreadsheet with like 15 categories, but after a month I got busier like usual and I didn't have the time to categorize every transaction I did.

> I went back to using the budgeting app that is auto synced with my accounts. It automatically gives me metrics and categorizes things for me.

P1-C1-03 Sep 5, 2026

Owner of a stair construction contracting company

Fort Worth, TX, Emmanuel Saenz

Personal finance and business finance

Tracks business and personal expenses consistently in a spreadsheet and did not find budgeting apps useful.

> I don't really have one, I've always been consistent with tracking all the business and personal expenses I have.

> I've tried to look into apps that can handle this for me, but they seem too complicated for me to learn and I'd rather just stick to a simple Excel sheet I created and understand.

> I was stuck with just using my own spreadsheet since the apps I looked into felt built for people with salary.

P1-C1-04 Sep 5, 2026

Mechanical engineer

Fort Worth, TX, Emmanuel Saenz

Personal finance

Relies on built-in credit card categorization and simple bank metrics; no felt problem.

> It was pretty convenient, but I didn't really want to pay the monthly subscription. Either way I have a Discover credit card and it already categorizes my purchases for free.

> It wasn't difficult, it was more paying for something that I knew I could just do by myself and eyeball it.

P1-C1-05 Sep 5, 2026

Registered nurse

Fort Worth, TX, Emmanuel Saenz

Personal finance

Replaced expense logging with a physical cash envelope system paired with a simple spreadsheet.

> I once tried using a personal budgeting template from Excel but I got tired of having to manually write down every purchase I did or money I saved.

> Having to write down every expense was the difficult part, however for saving money it was easier and more fun to visually see my money being placed in a booklet.

Phase 1 · Candidate 2: Eating toward a body goal

5 interviews

P1-C2-01 Sep 3, 2026

College student who regularly goes to the gym

UTEP campus, Samuel Alderete

Has attempted to lose weight while tracking calories and protein

Frequently discovers too late in the day that they are below their protein target, and finds consistent tracking difficult without meal preparation.

> I mostly decide when I'm already hungry.

> I would check the app at night and realize I was still like 40 grams short.

> The best week I had was when I meal prepped everything on Sunday.

P1-C2-02 Sep 4, 2026

Construction worker who strength trains

Outside a construction site, Samuel Alderete

Has attempted to gain weight and muscle while working a physically demanding job

Struggles to eat enough while bulking because an unpredictable work schedule makes meal planning difficult, and calorie shortages are often discovered late.

> I don't really know before I eat everything whether it's going to be enough for the day.

> If I knew after lunch that I was way behind, I could add a shake or bigger dinner.

> There have been days where I check at night and I'm still 700 or 800 calories under.

P1-C2-03 Sep 5, 2026

Recreational gym-goer

Gym, Samuel Alderete

Has tracked macros while trying to maintain weight and improve body composition

---

Stopped detailed macro tracking because it became tedious; would prefer planning meals and projected macros before eating.

> It started making eating feel like homework.

> Probably being able to plan the meals first instead of entering everything after I already ate it.

P1-C2-04 Sep 6, 2026

Registered nurse who exercises regularly

Gym, Samuel Alderete

Has attempted weight loss while working long and irregular shifts

---

An irregular work schedule makes daily food tracking difficult and can lead to unintentionally eating too little earlier and overeating later.

> My weight goal affected what I chose, but convenience affected it more.

> If I barely eat all day, I get really hungry later.

> Trying to log everything during a 12-hour shift wasn't realistic for me.

P1-C2-05 Sep 7, 2026

Beginner weightlifter and college student

UTEP campus, Samuel Alderete

Recently began trying to gain muscle and increase protein intake

Understands their general nutrition goal but has difficulty translating macro targets into actual meals, and often realizes deficiencies only after eating.

> I understand what my goal is, but I don't always know what meals I should eat to actually reach it.

> I had enough calories, but a lot of them came from snacks.

Phase 1 · Candidate 3: Entertainment and events tracker

6 interviews · captured in a grid sheet; date and role were not recorded per interview

P1-C3-01 Date not recorded

Participant, role not recorded on the grid sheet

Location not recorded, Jazmin Huerta

No per-interview takeaway on this sheet; answers were captured in a grid.

> I am always getting invited because someone else looks them up. But then I figured out that it's through FitFam that most people know about events here.

> I usually don't look for events, they just come to me on my feed, I don't actively look for events.

> Not as often, because I don't actively look for things to do, so I often just don't find out at all.

P1-C3-02 Date not recorded

Participant, role not recorded on the grid sheet

Location not recorded, Jazmin Huerta

No per-interview takeaway on this sheet; answers were captured in a grid.

> I'll probably be an outlier here, but my wife usually tells me about them because I don't have any social media.

> It is not easy to find events relevant to my interests; since I don't have social media, I don't have an easy way to get to this information.

> There was a Little Jesus concert in Juárez, and I didn't find out about it until it had already happened. I think it's because I wasn't following the right channels or people.

No per-interview takeaway on this sheet; answers were captured in a grid.

> I end up going to the same places over and over again because there is nothing new that is interesting to me, or at least it's not popping up.

> There is nothing that lets me see and learn about new stuff happening in the area.

> It happens more often than I would like it to.

Participant, role not recorded on the grid sheet

Location not recorded, Jazmin Huerta

No per-interview takeaway on this sheet; answers were captured in a grid.

> It has been easy for me because I am constantly looking up stuff that interests me; I join many online communities too, which has made it easier for me to find things to do.

> A store that I like was hosting a little market but I found out about it way too late. I think I missed it because I wasn't on social media too much at the time.

> It happens to me often.

P1-C3-05 Date not recorded

Participant, role not recorded on the grid sheet

Location not recorded, Jazmin Huerta

No per-interview takeaway on this sheet; answers were captured in a grid.

> I usually don't look for events, usually someone else tells me about them.

> I only hear about very big events like concerts, but even then only when really famous artists are coming to town. I didn't see anything advertised on El Paso's websites or anything.

> I think I missed it because I don't often look for events on social media, so I tend to miss them unless I am following the artists directly.

P1-C3-06 Date not recorded

Participant, role not recorded on the grid sheet

Location not recorded, Jazmin Huerta

No per-interview takeaway on this sheet; answers were captured in a grid.

> It's mostly by chance if I ever come across something, I don't even know what to look for most of the times.

> I missed a concert. I missed it because I wasn't aware of it sooner and I didn't have the time to save up some money and buy a ticket.

> Not too often, because I end up not hearing about the events at all, so I don't even notice I miss them.

Phase 1 · Candidate 4: Market Master

P1-C4-01 Date not recorded

Participant, role not recorded on the grid sheet

Location not recorded, Oscar Vargas

No per-interview takeaway on this sheet; answers were captured in a grid.

> Honestly, nothing. I just know that you can buy and sell stocks on apps and stuff like that.

> I feel like you need at least $1,000 to $2,000 upfront for it to even be worth doing.

> Losing a bunch of money because I don't know what I'm doing.

P1-C4-02 Date not recorded

Participant, role not recorded on the grid sheet

Location not recorded, Oscar Vargas

No per-interview takeaway on this sheet; answers were captured in a grid.

> Just a company 401k that my employer automatically enrolled me in.

> Market crashes. I work hard for my paycheck, so the idea of watching my account drop like 20% in a week gives me anxiety.

> I think if it can clearly explain things to beginners I would try it out.

P1-C4-03 Date not recorded

Participant, role not recorded on the grid sheet

Location not recorded, Oscar Vargas

No per-interview takeaway on this sheet; answers were captured in a grid.

> I have a tiny bit of crypto on Coinbase, nothing too crazy.

> I think getting FOMO on trends, but also getting caught in a pump and dump.

> I downloaded an app once that was kind of like flash cards, but that's about it.

P1-C4-04 Date not recorded

Participant, role not recorded on the grid sheet

Location not recorded, Oscar Vargas

No per-interview takeaway on this sheet; answers were captured in a grid.

> None. My friends and family always said that it's gambling and that it's better to keep it in a savings.

> I know about Wall Street, but I have no idea how buying a stock actually works or what you own when you buy one.

> If it clearly proves to me step by step that I won't lose all my money.

P1-C4-05 Date not recorded

Participant, role not recorded on the grid sheet

Location not recorded, Oscar Vargas

No per-interview takeaway on this sheet; answers were captured in a grid.

> I think my job has a retirement account for me, but I've never logged in to look at it or anything.

> The time spent having to research and learn everything while having to work. It's like a second full-time job.

> I downloaded one once, but there was too much finance jargon, I didn't know what I was reading.

Phase 1 · Candidate 5: Searching across streaming services

P1-C5-01 Date not recorded

Participant, role not recorded on the grid sheet

Location not recorded, Christian Lopez-Matulessy

No per-interview takeaway on this sheet; answers were captured in a grid.

> I have four. Netflix, Hulu, Disney+, and Prime.

> Last Sunday I think? I scrolled Netflix for maybe twenty minutes, nothing looked good, and I ended up on YouTube.

> I rented Dune 2 on Prime for like six bucks. Found out later it was on Max, which my girlfriend pays for. That one bugged me.

> Peacock, but then I resubscribed for the Olympics and never cancelled again. The first time I dropped it was because I saw the charge on my card and realized I hadn't opened it in two months.

> My husband and I went back and forth for half an hour and then put on The Office again. That's our default when nobody wants to decide.

> We bought Inside Out 2 on YouTube because my daughter kept asking, and it wasn't on Disney+ yet. It showed up there about two months later.

P1-C5-03 Date not recorded

Participant, role not recorded on the grid sheet

> Technically I have none. I use my mom's Netflix mostly.

> I went through Netflix one time and by the time I picked something it was midnight, so I went to bed instead.

> I paid four dollars for a movie on Apple because I wanted it that night and didn't feel like checking anywhere else. I probably could have waited.

P1-C5-04 Date not recorded

Participant, role not recorded on the grid sheet

Location not recorded, Christian Lopez-Matulessy

No per-interview takeaway on this sheet; answers were captured in a grid.

> I don't think I've ever cancelled one. My wife handles what subscriptions we have, I just follow along.

> That happens a lot. I sit down after dinner, look at the screen for a while, and end up reading instead.

> I bought Top Gun Maverick on the TV for about twenty dollars. It was right there on the screen and I pressed the button. I didn't check if I already had it somewhere.

P1-C5-05 Date not recorded

Participant, role not recorded on the grid sheet

Location not recorded, Christian Lopez-Matulessy

No per-interview takeaway on this sheet; answers were captured in a grid.

> Netflix, HBO Max, Hulu, Paramount+, and Apple TV.

> Literally yesterday. I checked Netflix, then Max, then Hulu, and after the third one I gave up.

> I rented Anatomy of a Fall on Amazon and my roommate told me the next day it was on Hulu, which I pay for. So I wasted money for nothing.

Phase 2 · Candidate 2: Eating toward a body goal

13 interviews

P2-C2-01 Sep 9, 2026

UTEP college student

UTEP campus, Oscar Vargas

No prior experience with the problem area

Has not tried tracking food before and says it would be pressuring to track meals or macros, but thinks an app would help remove that pressure.

> I've never really tracked my food before. I've thought about it, but I just never got around to doing it.

> I think it would probably be discouraging for me. I'd feel pressured to keep up with it, and I already struggle with getting motivated.

> Honestly, I just eat whatever's at home. It depends on what my mom cooks.

P2-C2-02 Sep 9, 2026

UTEP college student

UTEP campus, Oscar Vargas

No prior experience with the problem area

Finds it boring to track meals or macros, but would try eating less junk and more protein.

> I've wanted to track my food before, but I never really committed to it. I just try not to eat too much junk food.

> I think tracking could be encouraging at first, but I'd probably get bored of it after a while.

> Day to day, it's mostly what's easy to make or what's available.

P2-C2-03 Sep 9, 2026

UTEP college student

UTEP campus, Oscar Vargas

Eats healthy meals a few times a week

Tracks meals a few times a week and does not track macros; an app could push her a little further toward tracking macros.

> I started tracking my food because I wanted to make sure I wasn't overeating.

> No, I don't track my macros, just my meals.

> It's encouraging for me. It allows me to track my calories without getting too strict.

P2-C2-04 Sep 9, 2026

Gym goer and software developer

Gym, Oscar Vargas

Somewhat tracks daily protein intake, but no diet in place

Works out regularly and does not track food, but eats a relatively balanced diet; could benefit from an app that suggests other healthy foods.

> I've tracked my protein a few times just to make sure I'm getting enough. It's more casual for me.

> It's encouraging. It makes it easier to stay on top of my diet, but it does get annoying having to track.

P2-C2-05 Sep 9, 2026

Gym goer and software developer

Gym, Oscar Vargas

Meal preps regularly, but does not track macros

Enjoys meal prepping but does not like to track macros.

> I started meal prepping because it saves time and keeps me from eating out too much. So yeah, I like to meal prep, but I don't really track my macros.

> All my meals are the same. When I prep them, I don't make different ones, it's the same thing every day for the week.

P2-C2-06 Sep 9, 2026

UTEP student

UTEP campus, Jazmin Huerta

Has used a fitness and food tracking app before

Found it simple to start using a food tracking app toward a fitness goal, but only found it encouraging while keeping up with it; wants to track protein, calories and food quality.

> Since I was 17 I have been wanting to track my food intake. The process was fairly simple at first since my parents helped me and it was simple to track the food and calories I was eating with apps like MyFitnessPal and Apple Health.

> I think it is encouraging when you actually stick with it on a day-to-day basis but it is discouraging when you do not keep up with it.

P2-C2-07 Sep 9, 2026

Regular gym goer

Restaurant, Jazmin Huerta

Has used food tracking apps to meet fitness and health goals

Has found a food tracking app a helpful tool for fitness goals; it has encouraged them to feel better about their eating habits while allowing flexibility.

> I used an app called MyFitnessPal and it made it fairly easy since a lot of the items I was eating were in the system already with all their nutrition information.

> I see it more as encouraging because it makes it a lot easier to know what I have to eat more of to meet my goals.

> A lot of times I also choose things that I'm craving, even if it doesn't meet my goals, since I think having meals and snacks that make me happy is also important to maintain a balanced and sustainable diet.

P2-C2-08 Sep 9, 2026

UTEP student who exercises regularly

Bar, Jazmin Huerta

Has used a food tracking app to meet their recommended caloric intake

---

Used a food tracking app to make sure she was eating enough; finds the app mostly discouraging, and encouraging on the days she hits her calorie and protein targets.

> I had to consult an app because as a person who doesn't know much about conversions of body weight to height to calories and stuff, I just found it easier to consult an app.

> There is never a day for me where I do exactly a hundred percent what I should be doing without going over or under the recommended calories I need to eat. So I think it can be mostly discouraging, but sometimes when I do get it right, it's encouraging.

P2-C2-09 Sep 9, 2026

UTEP college student

UTEP campus, Christian Lopez-Matulessy

Used MyFitnessPal to track food last semester

Tracked calories in MyFitnessPal to lose weight and found seeing the numbers encouraging, but stopped logging consistently once classes got busy; picks food mainly on price.

> It was easy at first, but after a while I would forget to enter some meals, especially when I was busy with classes.

> I think it was encouraging because I could actually see when I was eating too much. Sometimes it was annoying having to enter everything though.

> Price is probably the biggest thing for me.

P2-C2-10 Sep 9, 2026

UTEP college student who goes to the gym regularly

UTEP campus, Christian Lopez-Matulessy

Tracked protein and calories for a few weeks after starting to go to the gym more

---

Tracked protein and calories to gain muscle and found it encouraging because it replaced guessing, but consistency dropped during exams; daily choices come down to protein, price, and how filling the food is.

> I did pretty well for a few weeks, but I stopped being as consistent during exams.

> It was encouraging for me because it gave me something to follow. I knew if I was getting enough protein instead of just guessing.

P2-C2-11 Sep 9, 2026

UTEP college student

UTEP campus, Christian Lopez-Matulessy

Tracked meals for about a month, mostly written down in a notes app

---

Tracked meals loosely in a notes app to cut back on fast food and found it both helpful and discouraging, since a bad day felt like failure; eats around whatever the schedule allows.

> I didn't use an app every day. Sometimes I just wrote down my meals in my notes app. It helped, but I wasn't very strict about it.

> It helped me notice my eating habits, but sometimes seeing everything I ate made me feel like I had messed up if I had a bad day.

P2-C2-12 Sep 9, 2026

UTEP college student

UTEP campus, Christian Lopez-Matulessy

Used a tracking app for two to three weeks over the summer

Tracked for a few weeks to maintain weight and found it encouraging for awareness, but dropped the measuring part because homemade food was hard to estimate; now decides based on what is already at home.

> The hardest part was figuring out the calories when I ate homemade food.

> I didn't like having to measure everything, so I eventually stopped doing that part.

> I think about what I have at home first because I don't want to spend money eating out.

P2-C2-13 Sep 9, 2026

UTEP college student

UTEP campus, Christian Lopez-Matulessy

Used a tracking app for about a week after friends started tracking calories

---

Tried tracking for about a week because friends were doing it and quit because logging snacks and drinks felt like extra work; chooses food based on cost and how much break time is left between classes.

> I stopped because I kept forgetting to log snacks and drinks.

> For me it was more discouraging because it felt like extra work every time I ate something. I think I would rather just pay attention to what I eat without tracking every calorie.

Phase 2 · Candidate 3: Entertainment and events tracker

12 interviews

P2-C3-01 Sep 9, 2026

UTEP college student

UTEP campus, Samuel Alderete

Regularly attends concerts, markets, and local events

Struggles to discover smaller local events because information is scattered across many social media accounts; would prefer a centralized place to find upcoming events.

> Unless you follow the exact business or page hosting it, you might never see it.

> There isn't one place where I can just see everything happening that weekend.

> I found out about a car show after seeing people's pictures from it that night. That probably happens to me once or twice a month.

P2-C3-02 Sep 9, 2026

College student

UTEP campus, Samuel Alderete

Looks for weekend activities, concerts, and things to do with friends

Relies heavily on word of mouth and often discovers local events too late; advance notice is an important part of their event-discovery needs.

> I see stuff like that pretty often where somebody posts pictures and that's the first time I hear about it.

> It would be better if I could see upcoming events several days or even a week ahead.

> Probably at least a week. That gives us enough time to see who's going and figure out our plans.

P2-C3-03 Sep 9, 2026

UTEP student who frequently goes out with friends

UTEP campus, Samuel Alderete

Regularly searches for nightlife, concerts, food, and social events

Finds social media useful for familiar interests but wants broader event discovery and a single source that combines El Paso and Juárez events.

> The problem is discovering something completely new. Social media usually keeps showing me the same type of stuff because that's what I already interact with.

> I don't really know anywhere that combines both sides.

> I missed a concert in Juárez because I saw a TikTok about it after it happened. I wasn't following the artist.

P2-C3-04 Sep 9, 2026

College student with limited social media use

UTEP campus, Samuel Alderete

Occasionally searches for local activities but does not regularly use social media for event discovery

Limited social media use makes timely local event discovery difficult; needs a date-focused source outside of Instagram.

> I'm sure there are more things going on, but I don't know where they're being advertised.

> It tells me places I can go, but it doesn't really show me everything that's actually happening.

> I want something that shows events by date and what's happening this weekend.

P2-C3-05 Sep 9, 2026

College student active on social media

UTEP campus, Samuel Alderete

Frequently attends markets, concerts, and local events and follows many local businesses online

Already finds local events effectively through Instagram but sees some value in filtering events by personal interests. Recorded as a weak signal.

> For me it's actually pretty easy. I've followed enough local pages that my feed constantly shows me events.

> Being able to just choose concerts, markets, food events, or whatever I'm looking for would be nice.

> Instagram already puts everything in one feed for me, so it doesn't really bother me.

P2-C3-06 Sep 9, 2026

Software specialist

County courthouse, Emmanuel Saenz

Event attendee

Wants a personalized way to discover events based on their specific interests.

> This is a difficult question because I don't have a number for events that have happened in my area that I am interested in that I'm not aware of, because I'm not aware of them.

> I would rather tell you what I'm interested in and have you tell me what's available, instead of showing me all of the events and then having me sift through a bunch of noise. If it's not Pokémon related I don't care.

> I think I saw a poster after the fact while I was driving, and because I don't drive in the downtown area that often I never saw the poster until it was too late.

P2-C3-07 Sep 9, 2026

Social worker

County courthouse, Emmanuel Saenz

Event attendee

Has difficulty discovering local events and would benefit from a centralized place to discover them.

> Most recently there was a concert that we missed and the tickets were already sold out. Also there was another race we couldn't attend because the registration was already full when we found out. It happens semi regularly, a few times a year.

> There isn't a standardized way to find out upcoming event info. It would be nice if that was possible, but then how would people find out about the standardized way to get notified.

P2-C3-08 Sep 9, 2026

Attorney

County courthouse, Emmanuel Saenz

Event attendee

Relies on friends and online searches, and believes advertising beyond social media would help.

> On the internet, mainly googling upcoming marathons and festivals.

> I only heard about it because I saw a sign about it. Doesn't happen that often but it's happened a couple of times.

> Just advertising more out in the open and not always on social media. Not everyone has social media these days and it causes people to miss information.

P2-C3-09 Sep 9, 2026

County worker

County courthouse, Emmanuel Saenz

Event attendee

Relies on their wife to find events, so the responses did not provide a concrete signal.

> My wife finds all of our events, mostly through Instagram. Sometimes she'll use Ticketmaster's site. I also sometimes hear about stuff on TikTok.

> Not difficult at all, my wife finds stuff for us to do.

> I don't remember such an occasion.

P2-C3-10 Sep 9, 2026

Victim advocate

County courthouse, Emmanuel Saenz

Event goer

No major frustrations; relies on following local accounts on social media, which works for them.

> I follow several accounts that promote local events. While I do occasionally miss things, social media is generally reliable for me.

> This happens about once a year, usually when an artist comes to town and I don't hear about it until tickets are already sold out or marked up by resellers.

> It would be great if official local accounts posted a weekly event round-up or calendar. Right now it feels like a lot of events don't get advertised properly.

P2-C3-11 Sep 9, 2026

Paralegal

County courthouse, Emmanuel Saenz

Event attendee

Would prefer a centralized way to be notified of events, chosen by interest.

> Instagram is my go-to, but I need to subscribe to multiple users to gather the information. El Paso lacks a one-source location to find out any info about events.

> I need information quickly, so pictures, bullet points, swipe for more, and if it grabs my attention, a link or QR code to buy tickets.

> If I could sign up for a page or online service where I click on interest types, and then those would be delivered to me via email.

> I don't go to Juárez, I feel it's still too violent.

P2-C3-12 Sep 9, 2026

Aerospace engineer

Bar, Jazmin Huerta

Regular event attendee

Is able to find events but would prefer a more centralized place, since they miss events they would have liked at least once a month.

> A lot of times I find out about stuff later and think 'oh, it would have been good to go.'

> It probably happens at least once a month where I'm like 'oh what, that would've been cool,' but probably every three weeks on average.

> There used to be a page that would put all of the events that were going on every week, but they stopped doing that.
